

SPACE MOUNTAIN QUEUE BINGO

Any trip to one of the Disney parks is a magical experience. But...

Nothing kills the magic quicker than overly long lines. With the help of this Bingo set, time in the queue line will go that much quicker.

Although the game's goal remains the same, to get BINGO (four spaces marked out across/down/diagonal), game play will change to incorporate the actual line that you'll be waiting in for each attraction.

GAME PLAY

Beforehand, print out the Bingo cards included in this document. BEFORE you get in line for the attraction, hand each person in your party one Bingo card board. Next, you'll need to establish a fixed order to go in (examples might include: oldest to youngest, tallest to shortest, alphabetical by first name, etc.)

The game begins when one of two things happen:

1. You stand behind someone in line (in the event the line extends beyond the entrance – a particularly busier day.)
2. You enter the entrance to the line itself. (Please note; some of the items on the board can be found while walking through the line...if the line is too short, then you'll likely miss those items. BUT, if the line was short, then you don't need to play Bingo to help pass the time!)

Once the game begins, the first person in the order has one minute to find one item on their Bingo card in the queue line. Once he/she calls out the item (pointing to it for all to see) he/she can then mark out the space on his/her board – ONLY that person, though. Game play then goes to the next person in order. The next player can either claim the item that the first person claimed or they can call out a different item they see from their own Bingo card. Game play continues in order, then starting over once the last person goes, until someone gets Bingo. As long as an item has been found once, it may be 'called' later in the game if a player wants/needs to as long as its their turn.

TWO DIFFERENT TYPES OF SPACES

In traditional Bingo, there is a caller to call out each space one at a time. In this version of Bingo, the items must be found in the queue. There are two types of items.

1. WORDS – These items are written in ALL CAPS. If you have a word in ALL CAPS in your Bingo card space, it means you must find that word written out somewhere in the line.
2. Items – These items are not written in all caps. These items are simply found as you wait. In the event of a discrepancy (i.e. a bluish/green purse when the space calls for a green purse) then the group must collectively vote on whether or not it should count.

ADDITIONAL THOUGHTS

- When on Space Mountain, it might be good to have your phones handy should it be difficult at times to read the Bingo cards in the dark.
- For marking on the spaces, if you don't plan on reusing them, allow players to use their car keys (or other small items) to poke a hole through the paper because writing with a pencil can be difficult. Of course, bringing markers for the occasion in a great solution...but that's just one more item you'll be carrying around for the day. Up to you
- If for some reason nobody has Bingo by the time you get on the attraction, end the game once the Disney cast member asks "How many in your party?" At that moment, the player with the most boxes marked wins.
- Remember – HAVE FUN WITH IT!
